CRIME: HOMICIDE

FACTS OF THE CASE:

Bremen public prosecutor's office and Bremen Land Criminal Police Office request your assistance!

On 30/07/2002, a body wrapped in a rug and other materials washed up at the sailing club Segelverein Weser e V in Bremen. The autopsy revealed that it was a young woman whose dead body had floated in the water for about 4 weeks. So far, it has not been clarified whether the body was dumped in the river Weser near Bremen's football stadium 'Weserstadion' and objects of some weight were placed on the body or whether the body possibly floated through the river Weser from Lower Saxony up to the sailing club.

The identity of the young woman as well as the background to the crime have not been clarified to date. Before the body of the woman was dumped in the river Weser, her body had been bound with adhesive tape and then wrapped in a jute sack, plastic tarpaulin as well as in a rug and tied with cords.

There are indications of violence having been used against the woman's neck. The victim's death might have been caused either by this violence or the subsequent drowning. In this matter, investigations are being conducted into homicide. Reconstruction of soft facial tissues based on the young woman's skull in 2002 shows how the woman might have looked at the time of her death.
